Translation is an act, a process, or an instance of communicating, carrying across, an idea, a concept, or a thought into a different system of meaning or action. Since ideas and knowledge are always closely related to power structures, translation is a political, relational and partial act that impacts the everyday reality of individuals and societies. Being engaged with issues of gender and conflict resolution, our research, activism, and lived reality are embedded with translation, mediation and representation efforts: we translate ideas into actions, legislation into practices, concepts into curricula, international ideology to local circumstances. We will dedicate this meeting to the translation processes in which we are involved, focusing on the ways in which traditions, languages, and individuals' social locations impact (and are impacted by) translation processes, as well as the translation practices themselves.

Translation, Gender, and Conflict Resolution, is the third meeting of The Sophie Davis Learning Community. The meetings aim to create a scholarly community that will develop various creative and innovative collaborations around these themes. The previous meetings focused on Hope (December) and Kavod (January). The following meetings will focus on the concepts: Compassion (April) and Belonging (May).

Power Point based poster session will be screened along with light refreshments starting 10:30.

Please note:

All meetings will be audio/video recorded and take place in Hebrew.

Seating is limited, please RSVP at: <http://SophieDavisLC.rsvpify.com>
